

Answer to Melbourne
& Sydney

My dear Spencer

I thank you most sincerely for the trouble you have taken in reading through my Ms. Your notes are most valuable to me.
All will receive attention - ~~some~~ and I should very much like to talk over with you when there is an opportunity.

I am much encouraged as at times I have felt discouraged

There are innumerable points and queries which now show themselves which I did not notice when I was gathering the material. If I had draughted the work ten years ago I could have cleared up most, if not all, of these points, but it is impossible in most cases.

The old people are dead and so are some of my best correspondents?

It was my leaving my husband and getting into the maelstrom of the office work I am now in that has prevented me from putting the finishing touches to my work which are now urgent necessities.

Yours faithfully

Anthony