

Coll Exon.
Nov. 18. 82.

Thursday. don't let this get about much as really he has his chance of doing much.

Dear Howard

Your letter has as usual come to be answered by the last post of this week moreover this is the last one which I shall write to you this time as I hope to be in Manchester in less than a week. If you have not heard of the slight change in my plans the latter piece of information every surprise Mr.

Hartog has at least got his profession, I am very glad to say, or so this leaves them in a somewhat unpromised position at Paris so I am going down as they have asked me if I could fill his place till Neron when a permanent man will be appointed: this being so I wrote to see you

'ere very long.

I fear Strouble as to what poor Smully thinks of me: my few lines in the middle of the week would I fear, will be terribly wicked of all all pacifying her just & righteous wrath & indignation.

I had a very jolly letter, as Leonard also had, from sea: what a difference passing seems to have made to his spirits: it was a very jolly letter indeed: please thank him for it as I certainly shall not be able to answer it. I am or rather am going to be very busy reading during the coming few days so as all all events will be all the while poorer than I know.

less biology than they do.

Yesterday evening I heard Woody & Sankay: the latter is slightly vulgar though he has a good voice: Woody is at all events in earnest: whether he will do any permanent good here I don't know: as at Cambridge they are aiming especially at undergrads. & certainly get full meetings. You can't help about liking Woody, save his looks which are extremely unattractive. "Post is closing" so I'll stop. Much love for B.

P.S. I'm coming up again to recover lost ground & read generally (must probably) the day after Xmas. Day. I hope your 1st LFB. goes well. Leonard begins his Woods. quest
