

April 19. 83.

Alderley in fact your country is better than the greater part of ours it is still more thickly wooded with higher hills in the back ground.

This morning I was reading Ruskin's lecture which he delivered last term which has just been printed: (actually at 4/- on very nice paper!) the English in parts is really beautiful of course it adds considerably to the enjoyment to remember how he said it. He gives 3 more this term. Could

You let me have Mr. Robertson's address - is it still Quaison Cherico Invention?

My work gets on pretty well: Siddiqui is very enjoyable but very indefinite: he says nothing settled but talks in a general kind of way & it is very difficult to remember however much you may understand it whilst reading the book. I shall read Spencer's "Data of Ethics" as well but not the ethics in Islam. What is your next work! Time is going very quickly & the next two or three years will probably make a good deal of difference to several of us: at all events I hope it will see one thing brought about which will make all the difference to two lives.
