General Pitt Rivers begs to draw the attention of Messrs Maple and Co to the fact that he has several times returned their bill with a request that the old marble chimney piece in the room which was refitted by them may either be returned or a proper allowance made for it. On enquiring at the shop, General Rivers was informed some time ago that the chimney piece would be returned, but nothing has been done, no notice has been taken of the communication, and the bill has been sent in again unaltered from time to time, notwithstanding frequent reminders.

General Rivers has given large orders to Messrs Maple and Co at various times, and he is resolved to see this point rectified before the bill is paid. The original marble chimney piece was worth at least £30 and probably could not have been put up
