

say about the Bronze age - it is clearly a point that wants careful working out.

Of course on side of the question is whether Bronze was introduced entirely by a conquering & intrusive race - this was clearly so in some parts of England but would hardly apply to Ireland.

Whenever the Bronze people conquered & took possession of the land they would naturally occupy the old Neolithic settlements & camps

I only wish you could have thoroughly explored Old Sarum - for this spot would above all others

probably have given good results and it would have been most interesting to see how the early conquests had been altered, improved & added to by the various occupants.

Yours very truly

H. P. Blackmore.
