May 24th 1895

Hearing from the men at Broom Quarry, Hawkchurch, that they had recently found some implements I <sup>went</sup> there yesterday & received what they had & inspected the place.
With several gangs of men there continually at work sending out two ballast trains a day the place will soon be a thing of the past & I much regret that no record has ever been made of this prehistoric Sheffield The cliff at which they are working is about 45 feet high & I should judge it about 65 ft in all above the present river level.

I herewith send you per parcel post a few of the best I received thinking they may be worthy of a place in your Museum.
Should you prefer to buy them please send me what you think they are worth, but if I may be so bold I should far rather have a spare vol of your 'Excavations' for my personal use & can assure you that its influence will not be wasted while I live.

I have the rough unfinished specimens, flakes, raw material quite at your service should you think them worth sending

Yours respectfully
James Ralls.
