

will annex this garden.

On the Monday I saw another river-forest, though much larger, but I forget whether it was at Berwick St. James or Mapleford. Are there Saxon, in part at least?

In that district the Chalk Rock is worked for road-metal

By the way, in driving into Berwick St. John, on Monday, saw a small pit that seemed to show 2 layers of flint, close to the bottom of the Chalk. I've seen the like near Maiden
Newton & other westerly sites.

Yours very truly
Whittaker

Ans'd.
Sept. 11/95.

Whittaker
33 E. Park Terr., Eton.
Sept. 95

(1280)

Dear General
The stick-dagger has turned up; so I now send it.
The top brass is somewhat loose, but the prodder shakes out fairly.

I also enclose the word-lock. The word is Gulf (which should be duly registered).
The letters must be brought in line with the ricks on the side. It seems to be a fair specimen.

I am glad to be able to contribute to your Museum, & wish that I could do more.

I wonder whether you would care for any of the shoe-soles noticed in the enclosed bit of Revue of a J. S. Memoir.

For that bit of print might serve for a label.

A chunk of the Royal George would hardly be of service, unless to show the commencement of greatness. I have also a like specimen from under Old London Bridge.

I had a very pleasant time with you, & on Tuesday came across an old friend, now a Wilts. Rector, who I had not seen for many years. He is at Sherston, & his rectory adjoins the peculiar moated mound by the river, which I hope he