

Faculty, when it belongs, was that it might be captured by the Classical School. You know I think what sort of answer I shall give to such a proposal if it comes to me in a definite form, but in that case I shall communicate with you at once and ask you to intervene

Yours truly
Edward B. Lyell

L1400

Winden.

Wellington, Somerset.

Sep. 23. 1895

Dear General Pitt Rivers

The photograph of the wonderful flint knife & its handle has come on to me here, & some day I hope to be able to examine the original. It seems a most interesting feature that the carving of animals should not be a hieroglyphic inscription but a procession of animals, no doubt charadees of the country of the tribe who made the knife. One thinks of the carved horns from the other side of Africa.

The prospects of Anthropology at Oxford are just now very cloudy. When the scheme of an examination & degree in Anthropology was drawn out at the last stage by Convocation at the end of the past term, it was said more than once that Anthropology ought to be given over to the Faculty of Literae Humaniores to be placed among the other subjects of the "Greats" examination. Apparently the main motive of the successful opposition to Anthropology having an examination in the Science