My dear General Pitt Rivers

I hear the Watts
had a first rate quilliff who managed
the Melcombe farm
during the life time of the father viz Watts & continued doing so when his son succeeded him
They did not expect a son went to America to with the father. My informant says the Melcombe men were unable to get on without him

had him back and float him. I tell you this in case
you should like him to spirit down. My husband considers the farm to be a very good one, but it will require a man to understand all the
mysteries of stock buying & selling. If you think that there is something worth considering about I will make extensive enquiries

I remain
Yours most sincerely
W. M. M. - Playdell
