24 Sept. 1899

My dear General,

A few lines of sincere thanks, for the trouble which you took to entertain us on Wednesday, and the infinite patience with which you answered my foolish questions. I hope that you will not suffer physically from the effort.

The more I study your Museum, the more I recognise the importance of the work. The Museum will last when the books are forgotten, and from the centres around which other and wider knowledge will collect.

This is not, perhaps, health in our time: but I see no other way with the eye of faith.

Yours
A. de G. Bruce

Yours truly
