Dear Sir:

In reply to your last letter I have looked through all the flints I have left but there are none worth sending you as picked specimens. I am sorry to say, all the pick having been comprised in those I sent you. I reckoned the quantity together with the quality. Since you are so good as to give me the price I asked for both together, for the latter only I can only hope that it may contain something of great interest to you

Yours faithfully
