Ambleside, 12/12/99

Dear Sir,

Referring to yours of the 12th September, saying that General Pitt-Rivers was ill in bed; I write expressing a hope that he has now quite recovered, so as to be able to resume his favourite avocations.

If this should be the case (if not, please on no account trouble him until he is better) do you think he would be able, without inconvenience, to favour me with his opinion on one of the points submitted to him — the iron cone, No. 6 on Plate IX, about which some references were given in my former letter. If it be, as has been said, a ferule from a Saxon spear, it is not a little singular that there is a record of only one having been found in a Saxon grave - a class of interment in which spears are very common.

As to the spear-heads and the pottery, I need not trouble the General; for, since writing, I have found all that is needed in his paper on Caborn and elsewhere.

I am, dear Sir,
Yours truly,
G. W. Dymond.

G. F. W. Johnson, Esq.
