My dear President
I thought I would see our Secretary Mr. Folling before he left town for his two holidays, as I hope to let off before home
next week or there end.
So he came yesterday and we considered your letter carefully. From his experience, which however is not very long, but which includes the Newcastle and Chester meetings,

he thinks you would have a very good attendance if the Rushmore Day came on the 2nd Tuesday of the Salisbury meeting.
And, as we should have the pleasure of your company at Salisbury, during the week under this arrangement, I think, if you please, we might let that be.
As to the programme of the route by which we are to reach Rushmore, he naturally could give no opinion, so that we have to be settled by the local Committee: but he is pained by an impression that your address would have to be given at the Inaugural meeting ^{on} the first Tuesday, after the complimentary speeches which begin at noon.

Of course we are both diffident about suggesting what time you should take in that address: but in a country and with a mind so full of such subjects, we should expect a prehistorical
