Dear Pitt Rivers

In a quarry called Lodge's on my property a short way out of Shaftesbury while digging for stone, for some years past, gigantic Slag cutters, or rather pieces of them, have at different times been found, laying on ashes and marks of fire.

There is also a hole or small cave, in the rock, which has not been properly explored and is now almost blocked up. There may be nothing in it, but I thought you might think it worth while to thoroughly investigate it.

I have therefore ordered it not to be reopened till I hear from you. I should much like to be present if you care to see it, and will await your answer, as I know nothing of these things myself.

Yours sincerely

Richard Dyer
