

SNOW

L432

Railway Station,
London 2 1/2 miles
Telegraph,
Donhead 7 1/2 miles

Dec. 13. 89.

The Rectory,
Donhead, St. Mary,
Salisbury.

My dear Sir,

Mr. Chapman has forwarded me a letter of yours asking for a character of James Hill, smith.

I know little or nothing of his work, but he is considered here a good jobbing smith and he is thoroughly respectable.

I never hear of his being seen at the public.

His wife is nice looking and quiet, but I do not know much of them, as they do not often get to Church, and the parson's call does not generally tell him much. They are always civil and friendly.

I have accumulated a quantity of wrought flints from this immediate neighbourhood, mostly very rough, one stone Chisel. 5 inches long is I think remarkable. If you should be at any time this way, I should much like you to see it.

Believe me

Yours very truly
W. Short.