

Dorchester. Sept. 9. 1891.

L706

Dear Sir,

Pray accept many thanks for your kindness in answering my letter so fully & in such an interesting manner. The usefulness of a high bank, outside the trench, on a steep slope, for retaining that slope, is quite new to me.

I often wish that your antiquarian researches on & about your own estates might be varied by a spell hereabouts some time or other.

Parbury, with its elaborate take to you, if traversed across the smokes (originally) & with its skilfully graded road of approach & uncommon entrance of that road to the precinct, would (it seems to me) repay study & research, which it has never had be-stored upon it. So would the S. end of Marnbury Dings & the smok, perhaps covered, way to it. Here there are the Roman walls, of course; the foundations of which doubtless remain in places, & would tell their

I am, with much gratitude yours truly
