Rushmore,
Salisbury.
Mar. 18/95.

Sir,

Your testimonials being satisfactory and your character on discharge from the Army "Very good", I shall be happy to engage you as one of my assistants, and shall be glad if you will come here as soon as possible as my work is somewhat in arrear.

Your work for the present will probably be indoors, but excursions will be going on shortly. When you are away on excavation duty, you receive 2/- a day in lieu of board and lodging and find yourself, but in all probability the others will go out ~~and~~ at first and you will remain here.

There will be a month's notice on either side on the completion of the engagement, but I see no prospect of the work terminating for some time. There must also be this additional provision that if you give me notice to quit, you will remain to finish the particular plate or drawing that you may be about at the time, otherwise the plate would be lost. I think that no plate usually occupies more than a week's time.

For the present you will have a bed-room to yourself, but when the house is full or if I obtain another extra clerk you may have to be in the same room as one of the other clerks. We have not had to do this for some little time, but there is a prospect of it.

A. Pitt Rivers.

I return your discharge Documents.
