There is no defect in the thinking faculty of the West Riding; but its perceptions and ratiocinations, its inventiveness & constructiveness all are engaged in trying ~~how~~ to discover how to produce within ever-shortening periods, a larger amount of the 'manufactured article', and thereby an increase of wealth. From the humblest workman to the self-made millionaire every man's

Dear Sir

I beg to thank you very much for your very kind letter, and for your kind appointment of me to the living of Melcombe Horsey, which I very gratefully accept. I regard the change from this cold elevated inhospitable region to a Southern county with all its contrasted surroundings as a piece of very good fortune -

In one of his books Goethe says "What we desire in youth comes in middle life or in age" - I have now reached the age of fifty, and for many years past my ideal of a parish, and the one for which I have earnestly longed, but which I never saw within the range of my acquisition, has been an agricultural district in the south, with a small population, and ample leisure for the pursuit of literature and science -

Having lived for nineteen years in this very noisy neighbourhood of Halifax with its manufacture, its bustle, and its incessant unrest, all which are the leading characteristics of the busy West Riding, my pursuit of literature and science though perhaps not totally without result, has yet existed more in aspiration and desire, than in actual fact.

Leisure is a word

I do not know whether there is any definite rule, or fixed etiquette in the matter of Nominations to livings; whether I ought to write to the Bishop's Secretary to ask him to write out the nomination and send it to you for signature; or whether the request should come to the Bishop's Secretary from the Patron. In my appointment to my present living I wrote out my own nomination, and sent it to the Vicar of Halifax, my Patron, for signature.

abilities are absorbed in the endeavour to accomplish this one object.

Hence in the midst of a social environment which is the offspring of such a mental condition as this, devotion to the study of subjects which are of more than mere ephemeral interest, or that lie outside the range of the improvement of mere material well-being, is next to impossible.

Consequently Melcombe Horsey with its quiet and its calm, its leisure, and its opportunities for the study of subjects whose interest extends over all time, is the very sphere for which I have so many years earnestly louped, and into which, now, through your kindness, and the kind interest of Professor Flower in my behalf, I am shortly to enter.

My wife and myself both beg to express our best thanks for your kind invitation to Rushmore, when on our way to Melcombe Horsey, - which we have much pleasure in accepting. But, as I said to Mrs Flower, when, before being personally known to her, I kindly invited me to stay at their house, I am a very plain, ordinary person, short in stature, with neither bearing nor presence; - and, my wife will forgive me for saying it, because it is true, that the same description will apply accurately to her, - so that when we have the pleasure of availing ourselves of your kind invitation, we shall have to cast ourselves upon your indulgence. And I fear that Professor Flower & Mrs Flower, in their extreme kindness, have imputed to me good points, to which I have no legitimate claim.

Not knowing what is the usual custom, or whether there is any custom, I have thought that perhaps my least error, if there is any error, would be, unless you direct me otherwise, to leave the Nomination to the Patron, while I prepare my other papers for the Bishop, and ask him to appoint an early day for instituting me. Then, at the time of my institution, my wife and myself would go and look over the house, and see what we required, which we do not at present possess, - how carpets could be made to fit &c., - taking the opportunity at this time, if convenient to you and Mrs. Rivers, of availing ourselves of your kind invitation to Rushmore. This one visit to Melcombe Horsey would be sufficient, and the further expense of a second visit need not be incurred; so that after making the necessary arrangements, and after having obtained when it might be quite convenient to the family of the late Canon Bingham, we could proceed to enter upon residence at the Rectory.

Once more asking you to permit me to express my very grateful thanks for your kind appointment of me to the living of Melcombe Horsey

I remain

Dear Sir

Faithfully and respectfully yours

Joseph Hall
